IV. Context and rationale for the Proposed Project

The Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) is the second largest country in Africa and has a total population of 105 million people, of which 51% are women and 48% of the total population is below 15 years old.

Sexual violence has long been used as a weapon of war by armed fighters in the region and in Bulengo and nearby displacement sites, an average of 70 sexually assaulted victims each day visit clinics run by MSF. MSF treated 1,500 female victims of sexual violence in July across just three displacement camps outside Goma.

According to global charity Save the Children, an escalating violence in Eastern Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) has forced at least about 78,000 children to flee their homes in the past week, with thousands now on the road to Goma, the capital of the eastern province of North Kivu.

Since February, 2024, the renewed fighting between the DRC Armed Forces (FARDC) and rebels of the March 23 Movement (M23), a non-state armed group, has displaced at least 150,000 people, more than half of them are children. Until March 2024, more than 6 million Congolese people were killed

Parents have reported that many children have been separated in the violence although the number of lost children remains unknown, said the statement.¹

The most striking example is about a young Congolese girl born in Kenya who, since her birth, has heard that there are always wars and massacres in her region which is Kivu.
